Top marks for TLE

Congratulations to The Learning Enterprise (TLE) for being given top marks in its latest Quality Mark audit.

Inspectors said The Learning Enterprise recognises 'the importance of their learners and acknowledges their professionalism and the central role they have in achieving the values of the group.'

The Learning Enterprise offer a wide range of training for thousands of health and social care professionals, including short and self-contained courses as well as longer courses.

The latest audit report adds that The Learning Enterprise have fully met every criteria they were judged on. This include ethics and values, health sector management, learning excellence, and effectiveness of quality assurance arrangements.

In summary, the report says it's committed to continuously improving the quality of training that is offered to learners adding that

'this reflects a provider that recognises the importance of its learners and acknowledges their professionalism and the central role they have in achieving the values of the group.'

The audit report also notes that 91% of learners are confident that the trainers understand the sector that they are delivering in.

Jacqui Smart, the Director of Operations for The Learning Enterprise, said:

This is fantastic news and shows that the hard work across the division to provide high quality training for our learners each year is really making a difference. The Learning Enterprise is an industry recognised training organisation that works with people across the health and social care professions and it is great to receive such recognition and positive comments in our latest audit report."
